

Objective

Delta Electricity

Delta Electricity is an electricity generation company formed as part of the New South Wales Government's restructure of the state's electricity industry and has been an Objective customer since 1999. Delta produces around 12% of the electricity needed by consumers in South Australia, Queensland, New South Wales, Victoria and the Australian Capital Territory.

The Objective solution chosen by Delta was initially implemented to replace the existing records system in order to comply with state legislation. Delta recognised the opportunity to not only achieve compliance but also provide a single comprehensive view of all corporate information across the enterprise and improve business processes.

The solution has evolved over time in line with Delta's changing information needs. It supports electronic document, records, archives, and disposal management while integrating with key business systems. Crucially, the system also allows Delta to maintain and optimise their high-cost, high-value infrastructure assets through remote access to current plans, drawings and maintenance schedules.

Delta has realised the importance of knowledge management within the organisation and relies on its solutions to support knowledge generated by Delta so that it can continue to deliver on innovation and performance improvement.

Further benefits include risk mitigation by ensuring that the organisation has access to complete records, audit trails and evidentiary proof in the event of litigation. The solution has also enabled Delta to develop a more collaborative working environment whereby staff based at head office and those working in the power stations can work on projects together and have access to the same, business critical information.
